

Financial Fact Friday:

Retirees are doing pretty well, according to the data

While future retirees are often scared about their financial situation, most people who are already in retirement actually indicate they're doing pretty well. In fact, a recent report from the Society of Actuaries revealed that 76% of current retirees are doing either the same as they expected they would be in retirement, or are doing better than they thought they would be. That includes 12% who said their finances were shaping up much better than anticipated; 24% who said they were doing somewhat better financially; and 41% who felt they were doing just about how they expected they would. By contrast, only 18% are faring somewhat worse than planned, and just 6% have found their financial situation is much worse than they thought it would be when they were still working.

(Source: Fool)

<https://www.fool.com/retirement/2020/07/09/worried-about-having-enough-retirement-savings-her.aspx>